

Our Enquiry Based Learning question that the children have been working towards is: 'How has the use of the Tyne changed over time?'

Giraffes visited The Discovery Museum to view the Newcastle Bridges display with the focus on the use of the river and local area. Whilst also taking part in a bridge building workshop.

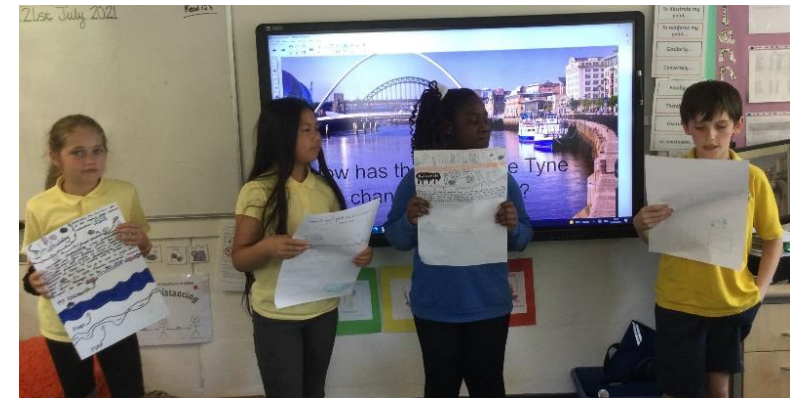

We walked along the river Tyne to explore the landscape and experience the structure of the bridges for ourselves and how they were being used. Along the way we stopped, we create some observational sketches of the bridges.

Following our research on uses of the river Tyne, coal mining, bridges, shipbuilding, fishing and industry we wrote a non-chronological report using our researched information.

Giraffes worked in mixed ability groups to share their research and knowledge with each other and work together to create a group presentation creating posters of their own designs ready to present their conclusions to the EBL question.

Within their mixed ability groups Giraffes confidently presented their findings of how the use of the river Tyne had changed over time.
